Local 2002/Section locale 2002

Code of Conduct and Ethics

Unions are voluntary democratic organizations in which we view each other as equals. Discrimination, harassment, unreasonable dissention and personal attacks violate our principals, undermine our Solidarity and erode our strength.

Our Collective Bargaining strength, influence and credibility in the workplace is based on our internal organization, mobilization and Solidarity.

We, the members of CAW Local 2002 have joined together to help one another and unite our strength to win better wages, working conditions and social justice through collective bargaining and political action.

We recognize that human beings are fallible but we believe in democratic principles and Solidarity and want a local which operates by rule of law, constitution, bylaws and common sense.

Subject to reasonable rules and regulations each member has freedom of speech, the right to run for office, nominate and to vote in free, fair and honest elections.

In a democratic union, as in a democratic society, all members have rights but they also must accept corresponding obligations. All members have the right to freely criticize the policies of union officials, however, this does not include the right to undermine the union as an institution or vilify or humiliate other members of the union.

Should any member or officer disagree with or wish to appeal action of the local or officers they must first attempt to resolve the matter within the local union and exhaust all avenues of appeal in the local union prior to seeking outside recourse.

In accepting nomination for office members agree to uphold these principles, rights and obligations.

Code de conduite et d'éthique

Les syndicats sont des organisations démocratiques volontaires où les gens se considèrent les uns les autres comme des égaux. La discrimination, le harcèlement, les dissensions déraisonnables et les attaques personnelles sont contraires à nos principes, sapent notre solidarité et minent notre pouvoir.

Notre pouvoir de négociation collective, notre influence et notre crédibilité en milieu de travail reposent sur notre organisation, notre mobilisation et notre solidarité à l'interne.

Nous, les membres de la section locale 2002 des TCA, joignons nos efforts pour nous aider les uns les autres et pour consolider notre pouvoir pour remporter de meilleurs salaires, de meilleures conditions de travail et la justice sociale par l'intermédiaire de la négociation collective et de l'action politique.

Nous reconnaissons que l'être humain est faillible, mais nous avons foi dans les principes démocratiques et dans la solidarité et nous voulons une section locale qui fonctionne dans le respect de la loi, des Statuts, des Règlements et du bon sens.

Sous réserve de règles et de règlements raisonnables, chaque membre est libre de parler, de briguer une fonction électorale, de mettre une personne en candidature et de voter dans le cadre d'élections libres, équitables et honnêtes.

Dans un syndicat démocratique autant que dans une société démocratique, tous les membres ont des droits, mais ils doivent aussi accepter des obligations correspondantes. Tous les membres ont le droit de critiquer librement les politiques des dirigeantes et dirigeants officiels du syndicat; cependant, ce droit ne s'étend pas au droit de miner le syndicat en tant qu'institution ni de diffamer ou d'humilier d'autres membres du syndicat.

Les membres et les dirigeantes et dirigeants en désaccord ou souhaitant en appeler d'actions de la section locale ou de ses dirigeantes ou dirigeants doivent en premier lieu tenter de régler la question au sein de la section locale et épuiser toutes les avenues d'appel au sein de la section locale avant d'envisager un recours extérieur.

En acceptant leur mise en candidature, les membres acceptent d'adhérer à ces principes, droits et obligations.
